2015 NATIONAL HEALTH RESEARCH FORUM

STRAIGHT TALK ABOUT THE FUTURE OF MEDICAL AND HEALTH RESEARCH

Research!America’s National Forum provides an ideal setting for top leaders in government, industry, patient advocacy, academia and the media to discuss key medical and health research issues as they bear on U.S. medical innovation and the public health. Moderated by high profile journalists, the Forum is the only event of its kind that convenes the directors of relevant federal agencies and other leaders within the research ecosystem in a setting where a distinguished audience may hear from, ask questions of and interact with those who are helping advance public health and shape the future of medical progress.

The 2015 National Health Research Forum will start with a reserved seating luncheon where sponsors are seated with agency heads, panelists and Research!America Board Members. During lunch will be panel discussions, each followed by a Q&A session.

THURSDAY
SEPTEMBER 10, 2015

Support a frank conversation designed to take advocacy for medical progress in new directions

- The discussions are not scripted. The goal is candid, thought-provoking discussion that catalyzes efforts to make medical progress a higher national priority.
- The discussions are not dated. The current economic, fiscal and political context informs the topic matter to help ensure productive outcomes.
- The discussions are not speeches. Interaction between the panelists and a robust question and answer period broadens the scope of each conversation.

Forum sponsors...

- Participate in the discussions, offering unique perspectives and new ideas.
- Represent government, academia, patient advocacy and industry.
- Contribute to an informed and engaged audience, critical to a meaningful discussion.

In addition to agency heads, panelists have included such notable leaders as Nancy Brown, CEO, American Heart Association; Mark McClellan, MD, Director, Engelberg Center for Health Care Reform; William Hart, MD, PhD, Global Head, Janssen Research & Development; Bart Peterson, Senior VP Corporate Affairs and Communications, Lilly; Robert Hariri, MD, PhD, CEO Celgene Cellular Therapeutics; Jay Gershon, DDS, PhD, President Northeast Ohio Medical University.
